CHARITY GIRLS.

est, and most wheedling maidens who booths at church affairs, which are gotten up for sweet charity's sake.

For weeks ahead each girl expects a promise from every young man whom she knows that he will be sure to be there on some particular evening of that week. Of course, no man wishes a certain young woman to think well of him can refuse without being thought a churl.

Even the most unsophisticated country youth realizes that it will make an inroad into his finances. He knows that it will cost him but half a dollar to get in, but that which he has to reckon with is how much will it cost him to get out.

He enjoys to the full the plate of strawberries with sugar and He gasps at the price, but thinks it was well worth the 50 cents to have the girl whom he admires smile at him so sweetly, as she ladies out the dish of berries with her own fair hands.

The girl of the next booth appeals to him to please buy a carnation— "they are only 50 cents"—he does not know how to refuse, when he knows that the eyes of the girl he cares for are still following him.

By this time a bevy of girls crowd ound him. One has verses on around him. heart shaped picture cards for sale. She will let him have a nice little couplet for 50 cents, but she is sure he would rather have a nice little love verse instead, even if it is a dollar. Another has a boy of sugar kisses,

Then there's the girl with the pink Then there's the pretty girl with the grab bag, who importunes him not to slight her booth, since he patron ized all of the other girls The girl who had the flashing pic-ture booth was equally persuasive. It cost him $2 for a tintype Next came the autograph booth. Charity is all very delightful. But young men who have to work late and early, and even overtime, for their hard earned money, don't appreciate being stacked up to be sent off to the heathen Chinee in a bunch.

There's often a reason as to why roung men do not attend charity faitivals more than once.

On his return he stopped in Denver for a two days' conference with representatives of the sugar industry in all parts of the United States. With no new factories, there can be little increase in production in the United States during the next four years, accord-

> "Business in the east," said Mr. Cutler, "is not the best. The steel orders for the year are much smaller than they were a year ago. This in itself indicates little disposition for new buildings and improvements. It is certain that this company will make no improvements, because we do not know how free trade is going to affect us. As a matter of fact we had planned for more factories, but the uncertainty of the future prevents our proceeding with these plans. This seems to be characteristic of the industry throughout the United States. It simply means that there can be no increase in the pres ent production, beyond the presen elty of the factories.

ing to Mr. Cutler.

"Of course, we do not know how free trade is going to affect us yet It remains to be seen, but with the uncertainty existing there seems to be little inclination to risk investments on the outcome. Colorado is going to reduce the price on sugar beets in next year's contracts. I do not know yet what we will do. Still I hope that it will not be necessary for us to make any reduction in the beet prices.

"The sugar market is unsettled. During the canning season there was a fair demand. However, this is about ended and the future is very uncertain It is a hand to mouth proposition and dealers are not inclined to speculate. Where formerly they were putting in heavy stocks this year they are merely taking enough for their immediate needs.

"The reduction in the sugar tariff of 34 cents, or 20 per cent of the present tariff, which goes in effect next March, has already been discounted. This reduction has reflect ed on the prices of the present year Sugar prices this year have been lower than ever before and this has been one of the principal reasons Consequently, the actual reduction of the tariff in March will not be felt to any extent, because of the changes that have been made in anticipation of the reduction.

"The tonnage of sugar beets, whole, this year, will be greater than last year, However the percentage of sugar is lower, but the present weather, warm days and cold nights. s having the effect of increasing the percentage. The increase in tonnage is due largely to new acreage. Col-orado will have 500,000 tons of beets more this year than a year ago. Utah and Idaho will show increases
